This proposal repeals CIA's training authorization without effective substitute and CIA has objected to its submission to the Congress as presently drafted.

S. 2366
(Smathers and Kennedy)
H. R. 6854
(Holifield)

To amend the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act in regard to the traffic management functions of the General Services Administration.

These series of bills arise out of the recommendations of the Hoover Commission. Each of them, in effect, repeals the exemption granted to CIA in the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act in regard to these matters. The bills relating to real property management and surplus property contain a provision authorizing the President to make specific exemptions by Executive Order, as does S. 2366.

These bills provide that the Administrator of GSA shall have complete authority and responsibility with respect to management of all real property owned or leased by U.S. and presently managed by any executive agency, including all matters relating to acquisition, maintenance, protection and disposal together with periodic inspections to determine compliance with GSA standards and regulations. All funds for operation and maintenance of general purpose public buildings shall be appropriated to GSA and expended under their direction.

These bills would vest in the Administrator of GSA exclusive authority with respect to the utilization and disposal of excess and surplus property, real and personal, which is under the control of any executive agency.

These bills provide that the GSA shall exercise all functions heretofore exercised by civilian agencies of the Government with respect to the operation and management of warehouses and other storage facilities.

These bills will place in GSA, or subject to GSA policy, all transportation, traffic, and public utility management now exercised by agencies of the Government.
